

This beautiful line drawing of a bouquet of flowers, created by SBMA's Museum Teaching Artist, cries out for color. It is inspired by a richly colored painting by Mexican born artist Alfredo Ramos Martínez.

The original is warm and textured, with a simplicity and boldness of line that comes through in this drawing. Looking closer at the original. You might notice the lace-like trim surrounding the flowers or the geometric aspects—rectangles, triangles and diagonal lines—that contrast with the softer shapes of the floral arrangement. Do you see the heavy vertical line of the tabletop?

Color this line drawing using the same palette Ramos Martínez did in the original, or with the shades you most enjoy. Or, give it as a gift and fill it with flowers and colors that are the recipient's favorites.

Write a message to go along with the gift of your bouquet.

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---

---